CHICAGO PLANT ONLY ONE STEP IN FORD PROGRAM

Fundamental Idea Is To "Create More Jobs." Company's Office Announced, Says Money Must Help Others.

LARGE PLANTS IN ST. LOUIS AND NEW ORLEANS PROJECTED

By Associated Press
DETROIT, Dec. 22.—Henry Ford's decision to construct a six million dollar plant near Chicago for the building of automobile bodies and assembling automobiles is only one step in a gigantic program on the part of the Ford Motor Company that will rank as one of the greatest industrial developments the world has ever seen, it was stated the Ford Company officials here today. The statement said: "The fundamental idea is to create more jobs."

Asked how Ford developments of the program might go on, the answer was that "Ford himself does not know. But he does feel that fast as he is making money he is morally bound to put that money back into business to provide more families with incomes and enhance property values of the entire country." Meanwhile, large plants also are projected in New Orleans and St. Louis.

GUN AS EVIDENCE IN BULL MURDER

Dent of Firing Pin in Rifle of Burton Jones Said To Be Identical to One on Caps Exploded.

Burton Jones, held in connection with the killing of Jess Bull, was bound over to the Bell county grand jury at his preliminary hearing which took place before County Judge Birmingham this morning.

Rifle Exhibited.

Evidence to show that a 38 calibre rifle owned by Jones was the one that the cartridges were fired from the bullets of which killed Jess Bull was introduced by the Commonwealth. Deputy Sheriff Vanbeber, who conducted the investigation that led to the arrest of Jones, testified that he had panned a shell in the weapon and fired it for the purpose of comparison. The dent made by the firing pin was said to be identically the same as that found on the exploded caps of the two empty shells found near where Bull met his death. He had examined them under the microscope, he stated. The rifle and the three shells were exhibited in the court room.

Clarence Fortner and Roy Allen, who had hauled coal along the road where the shooting occurred that day, testified that they saw the defendant near the place about noon. There was no evidence that he had a rifle or other weapon in his possession when the two witnesses saw him.

Cal Justus testified that he had been with Bull a few minutes before the fatal shots were fired. He could not state definitely how many shots there were.

Henry Jones, Robert Cox and others testified to finding the mortally wounded man after the shooting, unable to speak. He had indicated by croaking his finger that he had been shot, they said. Asked if he knew the identity of his assailant, he had answered with a shake of the head. A few minutes later he had died.

Vanbeber Accepts Gun.

Deputy Vanbeber said that he had ceased his search for the weapon from which the shots were fired when he found the rifle belonging to Jones. Other guns in the neighborhood were not inspected. The rifle in question had apparently been tampered with recently, he testified, and was in such a condition that it would not stand cocked. Also, he stated, it had evidently been fired a short time before.

County Attorney T. G. Anderson conducted the investigation for the Commonwealth. The defense will argue for bail at some later date. The witnesses present were ordered to appear for the grand jury investigation here on March 12.

BODIES MISSING MEN AT MOREHOUSE PARISH FOUND TODAY

By Associated Press
SHREVEPORT, La., Dec. 22.—The badly decomposed bodies of two men, believed to be Yatt Daniel and Thomas Richards, missing victims of the Morehouse parish mob last August, were found today in Lake LaFourche. The limbs of the dead men were tied with wire. The bodies were nude except for belts and portions of trousers. One man's head was gone. The bodies came to the surface as a result of a charge of dynamite exploded during the night by unidentified persons. It is believed those who used the explosives left without knowing the bodies had risen to the surface.

SANTA CLAUS NOT BOTHERING BANK ACCOUNTS IN MIDDLESBORO

Advent of the Christmas holidays has not caused any great depletion in the bank accounts of local depositors, according to officials of banks of the city.

This does not indicate that a paucity of Christmas gifts exists this year, but rather that the thrifty citizens have laid by sufficient amounts so that their shopping could be done without resorting to their snug bank accounts.

The past few months have been marked by prosperity in Middlesboro and vicinity and a great many more deposits than withdrawals have been made. The large number of patrons who had Christmas savings accounts this year is another reason why their private funds were allowed to go unmolested by the exacting Santa Claus. Prospects for the coming year are excellent from the bankers' viewpoint which means that prosperity and general good times will feature the year upon which we are soon to enter.

Textile Imports on Upgrade.

By Associated Press
TOKIO, Dec. 22.—Imports of textiles up to the end of October amounted to 46,000,000,000 yen in value and it is expected that the total for the year will reach 50,000,000,000 yen, a marked increase over previous years. Approximately 90 per cent or more of woollen textiles imported come from England.

MAKE YOUR HAT FIT LINES OF THE HEAD

Clothes Should Be Self Expression. Not Fashion Advertisements or Disguise.

Not all artists make pictures with clay, brushes or paint. Some use velvets, silks or feathers. Mary Gladys Ogilvie, most original milliner in New York, is one of the latter kind.

When a customer wants a hat, Miss Ogilvie studies her for a portrait, then assembles her material and constructs the hat right on the subject's head.

It is her idea that hats should be made to suit heads, not that heads are made for hats.

Among her sitters are the smartest society folk—for her establishment is in the exclusive shopping district—and many of the stars of stage and screen.

Find Your Type

"Clothes should be self-expression, not fashion advertisements or a disguise," says the artist milliner.

"A woman's hat not only should bring out the beauty of her features, it should hint also at her character, her inner self."

Besides smart American and elegant Parisian styles, there are the steep and lovely Chinese caps, turbans from the Hindus, ringed hats from the gypsies, plumed hats from the desert, and colorful effects from Hungary and the Balkan states—all beautiful and full of personality.

"I pay most attention to line and color. The color must blend with the skin and hair, and the gown with which it is to be worn. It should not be so brilliantly extreme as to overpower the individual."

Keep To Nature.

"A small woman should never try to build up the size of her head, but rather emphasize its smallness. She should keep to the natural lines of the head and depend upon a snappy bow, a graceful feather, or some colorful bit of trimming for her effect."

"The tall woman should not feel called on to combat her inches by a flat or too large hat. The Russian turban, or the cloche shape with the full crown that extends beyond the features, is the best choice for the tall woman."

Miss Ogilvie came to New York from San Francisco. It was in Chinatown that she got the inspiration for her Chinese hats of a few seasons ago that were so extremely copied. This year she is featuring the colorful Arabian and Indian turbans.

EIGHTY FAMILIES GET XMAS BASKETS

School Children Give Provisions and Clothing to Make Merry Christmas For Poor.

Eighty unfortunate families were today supplied with well-laden Christmas baskets made up from contributions of pupils of the J. H. S. Each basket was supplied with a variety of food supplies and many contained underwear, shoes and hosiery purchased by money from the Empty Stocking Fund.

The baskets were practically all made up yesterday, though food supplies have been arriving at the office of Miss Marx for several days. The special efforts made this year to obtain a sufficient quantity of potatoes were well rewarded, no less than twelve bushels of these having been furnished. Among the other foods contributed were: canned fruits, corn, beans, fresh fruits, nuts, fresh meats, chickens and in fact, almost any article of food that can be found in any well stocked grocery store. In addition to the clothing mentioned, 60 pounds of coffee and 25 pounds of sugar were bought from the fund.

Among those assisting in the work of making up the baskets yesterday were: Mrs. F. D. Hart, Jr., Mrs. H. E. Heaton, Mrs. George Veal and Jas. Parnell. Among those who assisted in the work today by contributing cars or lending their personal services were: Mrs. Guy Glover, Jim Edwards, Tommy, Rose, Robert Styles, Billy Evans and Mrs. Edward Hoe.

The baskets were separated into groups, each of which were for a certain section of the city, at the office. Work of delivering was thus insured by each person taking certain section.

Many of the baskets were artistically covered with green and red crepe paper.

It was thought that enough baskets were made up to completely cover the list of the deserving indigent that has been made up by Miss Marx. Each basket bore a card containing the name of the family for which it was intended. The larger families were given baskets containing larger quantities of foods.

Miss Marx is highly pleased with the success of the work this year which has been made possible by the personnel of the school and the public in general.

SCHOOLS CLOSE TODAY AT NOON

Morning Is Spent in Yuletide Celebration. Teachers Leave for the Holidays.

Peace and good will and a general Christmas spirit reigned supreme at the city school today. The greater part of the morning hours were devoted to the singing of Christmas songs, recitations and other exercises befitting the approach of the yuletide holidays.

Each room of the school was artistically decorated in a variety of evergreens, tinsel and other ornaments. Many of the classes had Christmas trees upon which the pupils placed presents which were given out during the morning hours. The teachers received many marks of good-will from their pupils in the form of Christmas gifts.

At noon today the schools of the city closed for the holiday season. Work will be resumed on Tuesday, January 2.

Most of the teachers will leave for the holidays. Approximately half of them do not live in the city and these will visit friends in other cities. Supt. J. W. Brudner will remain in the city.

TRICK DOG GIVES QUARTER TO SALVATION ARMY POT

Perhaps a little jealous of the money that dropped a 25 cent coin into the Salvation Army pot a few days ago, a small dog emulated its example yesterday.

The trick dog was accompanied by a woman who gave it a quarter to deposit in the pot. Walking proudly on its rear feet, he marched to the kettle and contributed his quota to its boiling.

Donations to the pot have been fairly good during the past few days, according to Commandant C. Cuthbert. Enough money will probably be raised to do a great deal of good among the suffering families of the city, he says. Articles of food are especially desired and may be brought to the Salvation Army headquarters for distribution on Christmas morning.

MUST REDUCE PRODUCTION COTS OR LOSE TRADE

By Associated Press

TOKIO, Dec. 22.—Japanese manufacturers have been warned that unless they alter their methods and reduce cost of production they will lose their foreign trade. Mr. Akiyama of the commercial and industrial bureau of Tokio, on his return from a foreign tour, in his report says that in China wages are very low and that for this reason Japanese goods are being forced out by Chinese manufacturers which are, he says, just as good as Japanese. He also declares that in the South Sea markets Chinese goods are slowly supplanting Japanese merchandise and that unless Japan is to lose these markets entirely production costs must be reduced in this country.

SALVATION ARMY ASKS MORE TOYS

In Need of Provisions, Toys and Clothing To Make Poor Happy.

The Salvation Army Christmas tree program will be given Tuesday night at the City Hall, Adjutant Cuthbert announced this morning. Stores are requested to save any toys or clothing for the Christmas tree and a Salvation Army representative will call for them.

The Adjutant says the Salvation Army is still in need of provisions, canned goods, toys and children's clothing to make this a Merry Christmas for the poor. He says many people who have helped every year for fifteen years are under the impression that the provisions taken to the school are for the Salvation Army. He says this is not true and that no duplications will be made in distributing the gifts. Donations for the poor should be sent to the Salvation Army Hall by midnight Saturday night.

Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton

"Oh, look at this poor thing!" whispered Nancy. "Something queer must have happened to be sure. For when Nancy and Nick went to get the note to Santa Claus out of Margery Martin's chimney, there wasn't any there!"

"I'll bet Tweednose has got it and run off with it," said Nancy. "He's so mean!"

"I'll bet you he has, too!" agreed Nick. "Well, we'll have to go to the Gnomeland and get it back. Perhaps the Gnomies will help us. Come on, we'll have to hurry!"

The Twins were sliding down the water spout (although they could easily have jumped off the roof in their magical shoes) when suddenly a shade was drawn up and they could see inside a room where people were moving about. There was a man and a nurse and on the bed lay a little girl, her golden curls tossed over the pillow.

"That's Margery!" whispered Nancy. "And that's why there isn't any note. She's sick and she can't write. That's the doctor."

"I'll tell you what let's do," said Nick. "Let's write one for her!"

"All right!" cried Nancy. So they went to the roof again and slid down the chimney ever so softly until they came to the play room fireplace. Then they tumbled out.

"Oh look at this poor thing!" whispered Nancy. "She's got an eye out and no hair." So she wrote "doll" on a piece of paper.

Berton Braley's Daily Poem

Read this, you realists, who say that man is selfish, cruel, wallowing in greed; Read of this doctor—try then if you can To hold your faith in remorseless creed Of human soullessness, In the face of death, Waking a moment ere his life was gone, He whispered softly with his dying breath, "How are my little babies getting on?"

I say the Savior's spirit is not dead, When one who made the children all his care Asks, at the end, before his soul has fled Only to know how well the children fare! Who dares to swear that man is but a clod, When there are words like this to think upon Words worthy of the Gentle One of God— "How are my little babies getting on?"

Brave men, True Lover, Servant of Mankind; Loving, the Little Ones whom Christ has blessed, He toiled to aid. Dying they filled his mind, His final thought before his quiet rest. His was the faith of man unselfish, vast, Through which, on earth, heaven, shall surely dawn; This Newark doctor, asking, at the last, "How are my little babies getting on?"

THE ONE-MAN WOMAN

By Ruth Agnes Abeling.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

The life of KATE WARD had been filled with tragedy, but now she thought the climax was reached. In girlhood she had quarreled with her mother and then fled from her home to the great city, where she met, loved and married.

DAN WARD. Now he was dead and she had returned to find that her mother also had died and that her father, old

JUSTIN PARSONS, needed her care. This was said enough but then came CHINATOWN ALICE with her little baby to announce to Kate that Dan Ward, the dead husband, was the father of Alice's child. In her sleep that night, Kate woke with the conviction that a voice had been trying to tell her about an old trunk.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Justin glanced anxiously at his daughter during breakfast. Her face bore evidence of the night she had spent. Old Parsons knew that it was not going well. He said nothing however. He was one of those rare people who instinctively know when silence is truly golden.

At length Kate, herself, began to talk.

"Father," she said, "do you know anything about a trunk—or has anything ever happened in the family which involved a trunk?"

"No, child," mild surprise in his tone.

"Have we ever lost a trunk—or have we ever stored one away somewhere?"

"Katie, girl, your old father has done so little traveling in his life that he never had need for more than a carpet bag! Your mother and I never owned a trunk in our lives!"

The thing passed without a smile. Kate's heart was too heavy for smiling. Her brain was busy on things of the past. She was turning over the matter of Chinatown Alice and Dorothy and Dan's feeling for them.

"After all—why should he have cared more for me?" Kate was thinking aloud.

Justin caught the train of her thought.

"He would have cared more for you, Katie, just as naturally as flowers turn to the sun."

"You are the kind of woman men love. You're not the kind they flirt with, not the kind with whom they make loud caresses and who then sink, nameless, into oblivion."

"You are the kind of a woman a man wants to be a daughter to his mother and mother to his children."

"There are women and—there are women," Justin was reminding, "and there are chatter boxes who torment you with details of days shopping or the illness of some detested relative. There are those who never find a circumstance or condition quite as they want it and who insist upon mauling the thing over."

"And then, Katie," slowly, "there are those like yourself, who form, unknowingly, a golden band which spans the world of men—the women of the quiet heart—women who can accept their disappointments in silence and rise above them, women who understand the need of silence by men who would be great."

"The restful woman, who, amid the earth's riot,

Is eloquently quiet:

"Knowing that silence means, not being dull

"But like the sunlight, bright and beautiful!"

"That's the woman who holds not only man's love, Katie, but the love of every living creature—dogs and birds and children and—men. You're that kind of woman, child."

"And so Dan would have had to love you more than the others."

As the old man finished speaking, a neighbor passing the road whistled.

"Letter for you!" he called as Kate appeared in the door.

SULPHUR IS BEST TO CLEAR UP UGLY, BROKEN OUT SKIN

Any breaking out or skin irritation on face, neck or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation that instantly brings ease from the itching, burning and irritation.

Mentho-Sulphur heals eczema right up, leaving the skin clear and smooth. It seldom fails to relieve the torment or disfigurement. A little jar of Rowles' Mentho-Sulphur may be obtained at any drug store. It is used like cold cream.

Everybody ought to know that a Teddy Bear likes to cuddle. Well, then, you can't blame me for wishing that Santa Claus will sink me snugly in a stocking that belongs to tiny baby. Maybe that's why my one and Christmas wish is that I will be with a little girl who has dolls, s which will make me pretty and fancy dresses, and in boots, shiny silk stockings, large moving picture hat.

Most everyone agrees that there is more pleasure in planning on a thing than there is in actually having it. In my case, it all depends. Big Eaters Get Kidney Trouble

Take Salts at first sign of Bladder irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat food too much red meat and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus often ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

AROUND WORLD IN MOTOR BOAT

Thirty-five thousand miles around the world in a motorboat! This is the remarkable record just completed by Mr. and Mrs. A. Y. Gowen and their crew of eight in the Speejaaks. This is the first instalment of Mrs. Gowen's story as told for the Daily News.

TAKEN AS FIRST REAL VACATION IN 14 LONG YEARS

Tramp Would Have Been Easier If the World Had Been Smaller and The Seas Smoother, Says Tourist.

BY MRS. JEAN GOWEN
As told to Alexander Herman for NEA Service.

Traveling 'round the world in a motorboat is good sport. But it would be easier if the earth were smaller and the seas smoother.

If ever I do it again—which I don't expect to do—I will insist that another woman be taken along. On the Speejaaks there were nine men. All of them were as helpful as could be. But—they weren't women.

However, we didn't think about such trivialities when we began planning our trip more than 15 months back.

My husband hadn't taken a vacation in 14 years. His doctors ordered him away for a long rest. Before we had realized it we had talked ourselves into undertaking something that had never been accomplished before—a voyage around the world in a motorboat!

We left New York, cruised down the coast and made our final preparations for the jump-off from Miami, Fla. Most important of these—to me—was bobbing my hair. The men insisted it would make me a better sailor. Perhaps they were right; I was seasick only once. But now I am going to let my hair grow long again.

Everything was ready by Aug. 21, 1921, and away we sailed.

The excitement began after we left Panama and took the long jump across the Pacific.

We counted on getting gas and water at the small island of Tikaka. When we got there after 22 days we found the gas. It had been sent by special steamer.

But there was no fresh water. For five days we had nothing to drink but coconut milk. It wasn't half bad; but we couldn't get accustomed to the extra bugs that came with the nuts.

They made life intolerable.

And then the natives presented us with two live pigs and several chickens. We had to take them on board. But they, like the coconuts, were infested with the little bugs that would put the most hungry flea to shame.

We couldn't get rid of pests until we put out to sea, pushed the pigs and the chickens overboard and fumigated the ship.

Finally we reached Tahiti—4000 miles from America. With its fresh water, and several Americans, it sure did look good to us.

Before we left we had a wedding on the boat. The day was stormy, and the couple, Americans stopping at Papeete, were pretty sick before the ceremony was over.

Tomorrow—An outing with a cannibal king who was educated at Oxford.

One Year Without A Christmas

Did I ever tell you about the Year Without a Christmas?

If the little folks will sit quiet I'll take all of you to a cottage in a town so small you could scarcely find it on the map. It is midwinter and so cold that the air snaps with frost... so still one can almost hear the stillness.

In a cottage, seated around an oil lamp, we will find a blind music master with a massive head and a kind face, his good wife, and five children, and one of the five is relating the "Story of The Year Without a Christmas" right now.

Supposing you take out of your life the movies, telephone, electric lights, gas, furnace heat, bathtub, street cars, automobile, theatre, daily newspapers, magazines, player pianos, phonographs, tailor made clothing, pocket money and then see what you would have left.

I'll tell you what we would have left: Human love, consideration, tenderness, and the ability and spirit to make our own pleasures.

The Year Without a Christmas was a bad year. Times, never very good, were desperately hard, and music being a luxury, found a poor market. We lived because we had a great garden and in the dark cellar there were 40 bushels of potatoes, bins full of apples, Hubbard squashes, with their armored shells, a row of yellow pumpkins, many jars of canned fruit and a barrel of pickled pork. Over by the fence, in a shapeless mound of snow, were several cords of hard maple stove wood, and it was my particular job to keep the woodbox filled.

But money was an unknown quantity, and with Christmas in the air, with the one real day of the year approaching and with hope burning in our breasts, it became a painful duty for mother to tell us, as gently as possible, with her lips quivering, that Santa Claus could not go out and buy things because he could not pay for them. She told us how good and courageous it was to do without when we could not have, and explained that we would celebrate the day with an extra good dinner, and there would be popcorn and apples, in the evening, and father would play for us and sing the old songs that had pleased us so much and then we would be thankful to God because we were all well and warm, with roof to shelter us; and because we could still love one another.

On Christmas!

What would you do if some person in whom you had absolute belief and confidence should announce to you that at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning the sun would go out forever and the world with all that is on it, come to an end. I had imagined that I was a young man, with courage in my veins, but that night, in that little room under the eaves, where brother and I slept, the cold that had coated the window panes with ice found its way into my breast, and I sobbed myself to sleep as did the rest of the flock. How could I know that my small sorrow was as nothing, compared to the burden mother was carrying.

The days dragged on and Christmas came.

The good dinner was served and in the evening father told us some funny jokes and played the piano marvelously, and he sang that song that begins:

In Manchester a maiden dwelt;
Her name was Phoebe Brown;
And she was considered by good judges to be by all odds the best looking girl in town.

You say or sing that third line as fast as you can and it made even a heavy-hearted lot of children laugh. I can remember, over the lapse of years, the tragic final verse:

Then anger filled young Reuben's heart
And vengeance crazed his brain.
He drew an awful jack-knife out and plunged it into old Brown fifty or sixty times so that it was very doubtful about his ever coming to again.

And then mother kissed us all good night. Thank God we have each other.

Now I must hurry for the best past is to come.

We were blessed with aunts, kindly souls who loved us, who knitted yarn socks and mittens and gave advice; who made us wonderful visits, and I'm mindful of the first silver half dollar I had ever seen that came to me from one of these kindly women.

So came the frosty morning of Jan. 1, 1874, with the snow deeper than ever and one small boy with a red comforter and red-topped boots digging a new path to the barn to be interrupted by a loud "Who!" and who should be driving into the gateway, the steaming horses plunging in the drifts but a neighbor who had kindly brought up at great box from the depot.

I find no words to tell you of the excitement that followed.

Inside the box was the delayed Christmas and also joy and laughter and happiness and the tender look in mother's eyes.

How can I describe the gifts? They would seem small to you, but they were big to us. Did you ever something so badly that you felt that you were about to die, and then get it?

There was something for mother and for the blind father; something for everyone, and a letter that told us that we were not forgotten by those good souls who loved us so well.

Think of a Christmas made especially for us and at a time when no other family had occasion to celebrate. We were honored, uplifted and set apart.

We finished the day with more music and father sang to us in his happiest way:

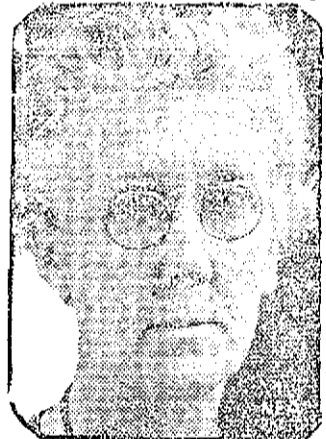

As I walked out on stony hill,

The plain was green and grassy:
'Twas then I met a pretty little miss—
Ah, but she was sassy.

There was a lot more of it, but the thing that will live longest because it was best, was the goodnight kiss and the last words from mother: "Good night and sleep tight. Thank God we have each other."

What Would Christmas Be Without The Railroads?

Next Monday, the cares of business, the problems of political adjustments, the discussions of employers with employees—all will be temporarily forgotten in the celebration of CHRISTMAS—that one day in all the year when good cheer rules supreme and the hearts of men and women turn to making each other happy.

The discussion of Christmas is hardly the theme for the management of a great railroad to use in one of its advertising bulletins, and yet the story of the importance of modern railroads to Christmas enjoyment is interesting to every reader of this newspaper.

The fruits, candies, and toys which the little ones take from their stockings early Christmas morning; the automobile that will bring joy to all the family; the new furs for mother, the piano for daughter, the pipe and slippers for dad—even the warming fuel from Kentucky, Tennessee, and Alabama coal fields, and the dinner, from its celery, olives and oysters from the Gulf Coast, to its Kentucky or Tennessee grown turkey, and finally its cranberries and plum pudding from New England—are all made possible by the modern American railroad.

At all times bringing to your door the necessities as well as the luxuries of life, the railroad is the largest single contributing factor to your enjoyment of Christmas.

The Season's Greetings

are herewith extended to the readers of this newspaper by every employee of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. May the year of 1923 and all that are to follow find the same spirit of friendly co-operation between the public and this railroad that has existed during 1922.

White Moss Candidate for Re-Election

Senator White L. Moss, Republican candidate for re-nomination as Senator from the Seventeenth Senatorial District of Kentucky, is well and favorably known for his legislative work. The work that he has done in the interest of good roads for Kentucky, especially for the Southeastern section of the state, is well known to the public. He will continue to fight for the $50,000,000 road bond issue which he urged so faithfully last winter, his only reason for wishing to return to the legislature being his interest for a state-wide system of primary roads. The bond issue which he advocates would be sufficiently large to defray the entire expense of the entire primary road system with such financial aid as the federal government and the counties through which the roads will pass will give. Senator Moss deserves the vote of all good citizens who wish to cast a ballot for the general good and prosperity of the commonwealth.
